RE PORT OF THE
SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

CITIZENS OF BOSCAWEN: The Annual Report of your Superintending School Committee is hereby respectfully submitted.

You have had, during the past year, 184 weeks of school, divided into 18 terms, with an average of about 10 weeks to each. The average number of weeks to each district is 25½. In No. 7 there was a Fall term in each of the departments in addition to the Summer and Winter terms which appear in Table No. 2. District No. 8 has had one long term, commencing early in the fall, instead of the usual short Summer and Winter terms.

Of the 13 teachers employed, 5 only were residents of Boscawen. With the exception of Miss Curtice in District No. 8, all had previously taught. Several of them were teachers of much experience.

So far as your Committee has been able to judge, the teachers employed entered upon their duties with a determination to discharge them faithfully. In some instances circumstances beyond their control have prevented the degree of success it had been their purpose to attain.

There has not been at all times that hearty co-operation of parents with the teacher, which is essential to a successful school.

The teacher is not perfect. Like others, he is liable to say and to do things not altogether wise or prudent. But it is seldom fair to presume these errors intentional. Those who have never taught a district school can little understand the demands made upon the patience of the teacher, or the many perplexing questions daily arising in the school-room, the decision of which is sure to bring upon him the displeasure of some member of the school or of the district. It is the part of charity, when it is apprehended that the teacher is acting unwise in any particular, to seek an explanation from himself personally. Until this is done, it cannot be quite right to communicate these apprehensions to others with a view to bring him into discredit, and it is especially wrong to allow a child to suspect his parent's want of confidence in the teacher, as such knowledge is sure to induce insubordination in school.

We cannot suppose that the citizens of a district would purposely wrong the instructor of their children, nor are these remarks designed to imply a censure upon the motives of any, but rather to point out one way in which much unintentional injustice may be done to a teacher, and in which the efficiency of the school is greatly impaired.

One of the most important things in a school, and at the same time the most difficult to secure, is good order.

Your Committee has felt that if our teachers, or any of them, were liable to criticism, it would be upon this point. It has been apparent in several schools that the discipline was not quite what their interests required.

The disposition of teachers to secure order with as little severity as possible, is certainly commendable. But pleasant manners will not always remove the tendency to whispering, idleness and play. Some may feel ambitious to return their registers with the blank allotted to "cases of corporal punishment" unfilled. Children are very keen to detect this disposition in the teacher, and when it is understood that a verbal reproof is the only form of correction to be feared, they are sure to take liberties which otherwise would not be attempted.

It is claimed, kind treatment and gentle means will, in the end, subdue the vicious child. But this, even if true, must be a work of time. Evil tendencies, natural and acquired, strengthened by years of indulgence, are not to be removed in a single day, or a single week. The moral influences, which are to do the work, are slow. The confidence and love of the pupil are to be secured. His higher nature must be appealed to. The evil effects of disorder in school are to be carefully and repeatedly explained to him. He must be won to obedience by a long course of moral and intellectual training. The difficulties of this process with a pupil whose mental powers are as yet, perhaps, unequal to the solution of a problem in simple addition, are apparent at a glance. While all this is being done, the school is annoyed by his misconduct, and the teacher, being occupied with the experiment of "moral suasion," is obliged partially to neglect the orderly and studious portion of his pupils. This cannot be right. The teacher should insist upon prompt obedience. It is due to himself, and the interests of the school demand it. Mild measures should be exhausted first, these failing, other remedies should be applied.

The closing examinations of the different schools have been creditable alike to teacher and scholars. The questioning of classes on most of these occasions was extremely rigid and careful, leaving no room to doubt the faithfulness of the teachers or the application of the pupils.

Several of the examinations were well attended by the people of the District.

This is an excellent thing. The expectation through the term that a large number of visitors will be present at the final examination, will stimulate teacher and scholars to greater exertion. The lessons will be more carefully studied, and the whole work more thoroughly done. All the statistical information of interest, pertaining to the schools of the town, will be found in the tables forming a part of this report.

F. C. MORRILL, S. S. Committee

Boscawen, Feb. 28, 1867.

The S. S. Committee of Dist. No. 7 ask leave to submit the following report:

The District has had three terms of school in each room. The Primary School has been taught through all the terms by Miss Rebecca K. Rowell who has had the charge of this school for several years. She maintained the reputation which she has gained in former years. In employing Miss Rowell for so many terms, the District has acted on the principle that when a good teacher is secured, it is wise policy to retain her services. Miss Rowell has shown by her success that the art of managing children is not confined to the masculine gender. The school in the upper room was taught during the Summer and Fall terms by Miss Sarah T. Hook, a young lady well qualified, ambitious to succeed, and ready to bestow any pains, if her pupils could make progress,—a little too sensitive perhaps, not bearing in mind that people do not always infuse sufficient charity into their observations upon school teachers as well as upon others.

The examination of the Fall school was very spirited and thorough. There was no servile dependence on text-books, but a habit of self-reliance had been cultivated by both teacher and pupils. The examination in Arithmetic gave your committee unalloyed gratification. The attendance was very limited. A large portion of the youth of suitable age to attend school was not there. The percentage of absence was very great. Why it was so the committee does not know. It was a matter of regret to him, as he is confident it was of loss to the youth in the District.

The Winter school in the upper room was taught by Mr. L. M. Kilburn, who has had much experience in the business of instruction. The school was well managed, but at one time there was a degree of insubordination, which seriously threatened its prosperity. But this was checked. If there is a place on earth next to an army, where order should be maintained, it is in a school. And law and usage place the government of the school in the hands of the teacher, not in those of the scholar. This fact is sometimes lost sight of. The teacher, in order to insure full success, needs the co-operation of the parents and the community. In consequence of the opening of the Pennacook Academy, the school towards its close, was very small. Only fourteen were present at the final examination.

Owing to the same cause, it is probable that the attendance on the Summer school will not be more than one-half what it has been in former years. Nearly all the larger scholars, who will attend school, will attend at the Academy. It is a question whether it will be necessary or profitable to have more than one school. That question the committee cheerfully submit to the discretion of the district.
